15. Customer Redesign

The Corporate Customer Services & Delivery Manager presented the report and gave a presentation on the customer redesign project. The project was delivered by officers to focus on the improving the customer experience across the organisation.

The project looked at services with high customer contact and identified how to give customers the information they required first time, without the need to pass the caller on elsewhere across the Council. A new operating model was introduced, to build a new Customer Solutions centre, which provided staff with a clear career path to build their skills and knowledge and improve the customer experience.

She explained that the company IESE shared their knowledge around training, putting the customer at the centre. Members were advised that this was a way to achieve and the future operating model would mean all staff have a core set of skills.

The Chairman advised that as part of the customer redesign, the Customer Solutions team as they will be called, would have a “golden conversation”. This means that the team would use previous knowledge to ask further questions in order to complete further tasks the customer may have down the line, so instead of four phone calls for four separate issues, one phone call could answer all four issues at one time.

In response to questions by Members regarding timeframes for this redesign, the Chief Officer Corporate Services confirmed that the team would be relocated in the Argyle Road Offices and would be taking calls from the middle of October.

Resolved: That the report be noted.
